The starting of works, increase in hands employed, advance in wages and prices of products and the heavy movement of crops are facts before which all speculative influences have to bow.

The week's dispatches mentions sixteen iron works which have started against one | the first which had been received sinc closing. While these things continue, with grain rising and going abroad in enormous quantities, the money markets have every reason for abounding confidence and the speculative markets for strength.

THE BUMBLEBEE. :

The Big Queen Scarches for a Home in the Enrly Spring.

In early spring, when the meadows first take on a tinge of green, and the apple trees put forth their rosy buds, we may often see a single large bumblebee flying low and swiftly back and forth across the lawns or pastures.

These great bees are the queens who have just awakened from their long winter's sleep, and are now seeking some favored spot wherein to commence housekeeping and found a colony; for these insects, like their cousin, the honeybees, live in colonies consisting of three classes, or castes-"drones," or "males," "queens," or "females" and workers." When our big queen has at last discovered a satisfactory build ing site, usually a deserted mouse hole, she cleans it of all rubbish and litter, and places within a ball of pollen, in which she lays her eggs. The young grubs hatch out possessed with enormous appetites, and, feeding on the pollen, eat into it in all directions. At last, when fully grown and their craving for food is satisfied, they spin edecons of silk in the remains of the pollen, and change to pupa. While her family is thus sleeping quietly within their silken cells, the old queen is constantly at work, building up and strengthening the cocoons with wax.

Finally, their sleep being over, the pupa cases burst, and the young bees Mutual Life of New York, come forth in all their glory of black | Travelers' Ins. INDIAN INK.

Consul Fraser Reports on How It Is' Manufactured. An interesting account of the manufacture of the so-called Indian ink, which is made only in the Anhui province of China, is given by Mr. Fraser, our consul at Wuku, on the Yang-tsze, in his last trade report. It is more correctly called China ink-enere de Chine and from Anhui it goes to every part of China and all over the world. In 1895 about two tons of it, valued at £564, were exported from Shanghai to foreign countries. The materials with which this beautiful black ink is made are sesamum or colza oil, or the oil expressed from the poisonous seeds of a tree extensively cultivated in the Yangtsze valley, and also well known in Japan. To this varnish and pork fat are added. The lamp-black made by the combustion of these substances is classed according to the materials and the grade of fineness, and also according to the time taken over the process f combustion. The paste made of this lampblack has some glue added, and is beaten on wooden anvils with steel hammers. Two good hammers can prepare in a day 80 pieces, each weighing half a pound. A certain quantity of musk of the muskdeer, or of Baroos camphor, for scenting, and gold leaves, varying from 20 to 160 to the pound, are added to give a metallic luster. The materials thus prepared are molded in molds of carved wood, dried, which takes about 20 days in fine weather, and adorned with Chinese characters in gilding. About 32 average-sized sticks of ink go to the pound. . The price varies from two shillings or less per pound to as much as seven pounds, there being over a dozen different grades. Nearly all writing is done by the natives throughout China, Japan, Corea, Tongking and Anam with this China ink, rubbed down on a stone ink slab, and applied with a paint brush of sable, fox or rabbit bair, set in a bamboo holder, and when not in use carefully covered with a protecting brass cap. The superior kinds of this ink appear to be used in China, and not exported .- Manufacturer. Reasons for Divorce. A North German spouse sought re-lease from a brute of a husband because he advertised her to go to the masquerade as a captive balloon, with a string tied around her ankle. In Idaho of late a wife of that region sought a bill of divorcement, one count in her indictment being that her husband smoked a pipe in their bedroom. In his demurrer he declared that he smoked only the best tobacco; that his wife knew he smoked when he married her, and might rationally have expected the occasional fumigation of their dormitory. He declared also that he habitually smoked on the doorstep, except when it rained, and that his wife objected to his going to the saloon when it did; as to his smoking in the parlor, he averred that he tried it once in his early conjugal days, and had no inclination to repeat the experiment. He was therefore forced to take occasional refuge in the bedroom, but generally smoked out of the window, as a loving and considerate husband should do. No statute was found in the Idaho codex covering the case, which the judge advised them to settle out of court on a basis of mutual tolerance and conciliation .- Chicago Inter Ocean.
